GRAND ROUNDS

Keynote Speaker:

Menelaos Demestihas, M.D.
2012 John H. Stone Faculty Teacher of the Year:

Menelaos Demestihas, MD is an Assistant Professor at Emory University School of Medicine in the Department of Emergency Medicine. He is an attending physician at Emory University Hospital Midtown and Grady Memorial Hospital in Atlanta, GA. Mene, as most people call him, was born in New York City but grew up in Atlanta. He went to college at Oglethorpe University here in Atlanta and attended Mercer University School of Medicine. His residency training was in New York City at Maimonides Medical Center. Dr. Demestihas returned to Atlanta after Residency and accepted a Faculty position at Emory. Mene now works closely with the leadership at Grady overseeing the newly implemented electronic medical records. He won the 2012 John H. Stone Emergency Medicine Faculty Teacher of the Year Award in his second year as an Attending.

Time: 11:00 a.m.-12:00 p.m.

Date: Tuesday: May 14, 2013

Place: Steiner Auditorium, Grady Campus

The Emory University School of Medicine is accredited by the Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education (ACCME) to sponsor continuing medical education for physicians.