Dr. Sierra Beck is an Assistant Professor at Emory University School of Medicine in the Department of Emergency Medicine. Sierra was born in New Orleans but grew up in Atlanta. She attended University of California-Berkeley for undergraduate education and completed medical school and her emergency medicine residency training at University of California-Davis. She returned to Atlanta after residency for Ultrasound Fellowship at Emory. She now works as the Ultrasound Fellowship Director.

Dr. Beck won the 2013 John H. Stone Emergency Medicine Faculty Teacher of the Year Award in her second year as an Attending. Her academic interest include emergency ultrasound and medical education.

Topic: “If Our Patients Could Give Grand Rounds”

Time: 11:00a.m-12:00noon

Date: May 20th, 2014

Place: Steiner Auditorium, Grady Campus
(Grady Campus)