Dr. Todd A. Taylor is an Assistant Professor at Emory University School of Medicine in the Department of Emergency Medicine. He is an Attending Physician at Grady Memorial Hospital and also the Director of the Postgraduate Medical Education Program in the Department of Emergency Medicine. Todd grew up in Atlanta and attended the University of Georgia earning degrees in Philosophy and Biochemistry. He attended the Medical School of Georgia with his residency training at the Louisiana State University in Baton Rouge. After Residency, Todd accepted an Academic Faculty position at Louisiana State University and taught for 2 years before moving back to Atlanta in 2012. Dr. Taylor won the John H. Stone Emergency Medicine Faculty Teacher of the Year Award in 2014.

Topic: “How Millennium Generation Learners and Technology are Changing the Educational Paradigm ”

Time: 11:00a.m-12:00p.m.

Date: Tuesday, May 26, 2015

Place: Steiner Auditorium, Grady Campus