Emergency Medicine Resident Fund 2012-2013
The Emory Department of Emergency Medicine has continued to grow and thrive in spite of and due to tough times. The residents now rotate through state-of-the-art facilities at Emory, Midtown (the former Crawford Long), Egleston, and Grady. Yes, even Grady has gotten a facelift with a new trauma center, PACS, and electronic medical records. But in many ways this is still the same program, with an emphasis on clinical and practical experience to train excellent ER docs. While the faculty has grown to almost 100 physicians and the department is rated number one in the country in federal research dollars, the Grady ER remains the heart and soul of the department. Joining the residency program has gotten even harder, with more than 1,100 applications this year for 19 positions. Yet there is still a lot we can do to make this a stronger academic program and to recruit the best and brightest. Recently we have been able to expand the international opportunities for our residents. Our dream now is to be able to send every resident to a major conference each year. Our “Adopt-A-Resident” campaign enables a resident to attend GCEP, SAEM, and ACEP over the course of his or her residency. Smaller donations will allow residents to attend at least one of these important meetings. Having residents in attendance will increase their opportunities for leadership and scholarship on a national basis and increase our growing reputation. Your help can make a huge impact! Thank you.

Inaugural “Adopt-A-Resident” Sponsor

With great thanks, the residency leadership would like to acknowledge our chair, Katherine L. Heilpern, Ada Lee and Pete Correll Professor of Emergency Medicine. She will sponsor one Emory emergency medicine resident selected from a competitive group of applicants to attend local and national meetings while pursuing novel ideas over the next three years.

Your support will allow our residents to attend one of the following conferences:

GCEP (Georgia College of Emergency Physicians)

The Georgia Chapter of the American College of Emergency Physicians is an association of more than 500 emergency medicine physicians. GCEP meets annually and promotes the highest standards of patient care throughout the state of Georgia through its advocacy and leadership efforts. Residents would be eligible to attend this meeting. The cost for one resident to attend is $800.

SAEM (Society for Academic Emergency Medicine)

SAEM is the premier organization for high-quality research and educational innovation in emergency care. It creates and promotes scientific discovery and the advancement of education. PGY2 residents will be eligible to attend this meeting. The cost for one resident to attend is $1,200.

ACEP (American College of Emergency Physicians) or AAEM (American Academy of Emergency Medicine)

ACEP is the largest emergency medicine organization in the world. Members work to provide resources to help physicians develop and improve current skills. AAEM is a democratic organization committed to many emergency medicine global principles. PGY3 residents will be eligible to attend one of these meetings. The cost for one resident to attend is $1,800.
